Viewing Art

...I guess that's the artist's wish for anybody who comes to see their work, that there is time for contemplation. No matter what the subject matter is, no matter what the visuals are before them, that they do take the time to ponder, to reflect. Hopefully there is some sort of an attempt towards this area, despite the way society has pretty well forced us to go in a more rapid fire direction.

Art really means contemplation, speculation, opening of experience rather than closing it down to surface viewing.
