Inspiration

These days, any artist, if he has a wide interest and he has an open mind, can't really say that only one or two artists have inspired him. It's basically all kinds of knowledge that has inspired me, from many sources. It can be artists or it can be from people in other disciplines and from other times in other cultures. There is no really one person that has sort of driven me towards my art. Maybe during my student days, there could have been some people... but I don't find that much to be of any relevance today. So it's an open field so to speak. I tend to see that my background is open, and I hope my future is open.
